WELCOME TO THE SECOND ANNUAL GIVING BACK GUIDE

Published by the Nonprofit Center of the Berkshires, the Giving Back guide is designed to connect nonprofits with people who would like to become more involved and give back to the Berkshire community we all love. Whether you are a second home owner, a retiree, a student wishing to perform community service, a recent transplant from another area, or even a full-time resident, you may not have had the information you need to make a difference. This book is for you!

The first part of the guide contains articles of interest and ads from our business partners who make this publication possible..

Next come full page profiles of local nonprofits who chose to gain more exposure for their missions in this way. Many people have told me they read every single profile, enjoying the "fast facts" and appreciating learning more about the "ways to support."

The back of the Giving Back guide features a directory of nearly 1,000 Berkshire nonprofits organized by category. If you have an interest in the environment or education for example, you can turn right to that section to find all the organizations associated with that interest. All nonprofits are listed in the directory free of charge which is made possible by our advertisers and sponsors.

5000 copies are distributed FREE throughout Berkshire County in schools, libraries, town halls, businesses, popular locations like Guido's, real estate offices, financial services firms, chambers of commerce, etc. This simply couldn't have happened without the support of our business community who generously purchased ads.

In addition to our sponsors and advertisers, we offer our thanks to all nonprofits featured in the profile pages, and to our proof-readers and writers.

This is an enormous project and we should be proud of the final product, made beautiful through Tina Sotis' graphic design, Qualprint's focus on quality, and Ann Getsinger's magnificent pumpkin painting.

We were pleased to learn that users find the book both pretty and practical:

- Giving Circles use the Giving Back Guide to identify nonprofits to give to.
- Elder Services of Berkshire County uses the guide to place Federally funded senior employees in nonprofit organizations.
- Agencies distribute copies to their outreach volunteers
- Schools and Camps use the guide to facilitate community service and after school projects for students
- Individuals read the guide from cover to cover

"The NPC Berkshires Giving Guide works! The Flying Cloud Institute profile in the Giving Guide happened to be read by a newcomer to the area, Mike Mimnaugh, a human resources specialist. He saw that we were looking for volunteers in that arena and was intrigued. I am thrilled to say that Mike is now volunteering with us and a member of our Human Resources Committee. This visibility has certainly helped us in a very meaningful way."

– Amy Rudnick, Board Chair, Flying Cloud Institute.

PUNGL: WHERE GENEROSITY MEETS JOY

Housatonic Start-Up Launches Powerful Online Fundraising Platform

By Robin Catalano

Last summer, 15-year-old Zachary Goffin, a native of Great Barrington and an avid athlete and eBay shopper, attended the birthday party of a friend. Her invitation requested that partygoers not bring gifts, and Zach was intrigued. "I thought it was great that she didn't want things; she just wanted to enjoy her time with friends," he recalls.

Shortly after, at a sporting event, Zach spied some bricks outside the stadium with donors' names engraved on them, and had a lightbulb moment. "The bricks reminded me of what these people are interested in and what they find meaningful," Zach explains. "I thought there should be a place, like eBay, where you can shop for charitable gifts you can name after people, and where browsing one item might lead you to another and another."

Zach took the concept to his father, who brought on Housatonic-based creative director Abby Tovell to transform it into reality. After a year of designing and testing the new platform, getting feedback from local nonprofits, and refining the idea, Pungl was born.

Named after a word for "giving" that Zach came across while reading the Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, Pungl—based in the Berkshires—is an exciting new online marketplace for the buying and selling of unique gifts that not only celebrate a person or event, but also give back. Nonprofits can create a "shop" full of fundraising projects, then list various items available for donation, all of which can be named after the donor or gift recipient. Site users from across the country donate toward these charitable gifts to celebrate their own accomplishments or milestones, or those of a loved one. The nonprofit then names the gift in honor of the donor or recipient, leaving a lasting legacy.

This unique "double giving" model allows nonprofits, community organizations, and donors to connect with the people, places, and pursuits they love. For example, Hotfutbol, a nonprofit that runs after-school programs in Haiti, has created a spotlight project to build a new basketball court at a park in Port-au-Prince. On Pungl, they have offered adjustable posts, backboards, and hoops that donors can fund to complete the project. In exchange, HotFutbol includes donors' names on the park wall, and provides photos of the wall and a personalized video as a thank-you.

Tovell says, "Pungl really can be a game changer for community-based organizations who need to raise funds, reach a broader audience, and create a broader network of partners." Pointing to Pungl's ability to connect donors and organizations across the country, no matter their size or staff resources, she notes, "Our marketplace levels the playing field for nonprofits and organizations of any size, who might not have a large staff or budget to draw from in creating fundraising campaigns, but who want to harness the combined power of their own creative thinking and our innovative technology."

Because the projects on Pungl fall into a wide range of prices, they're accessible to people of all backgrounds and budgets. This allows us all an equal opportunity to make a positive impact on the lives of others, and makes Pungl the place where generosity meets joy.

GOOD WEALTH

By Arista Advisory Group

Money: a word saturated with significance for most people alive today. Whatever the geography or culture of our lives, whether by our own measure or the measure of others, our proximity to money or wealth profoundly determines a complex set of conditions that affect the outline and texture of our choices. Directly or indirectly this has always been true. In the context of life today, the issues emerging from the creation and distribution of wealth are in the forefront.

As a result, personal and organizational financial planning has emerged as a necessary process to help manage the more complex landscape of financial concerns. The financial planning process has also taken a leading role and become a significant force increasing awareness and impact on the way money affects the larger ethical, social and environmental concerns on a planetary scale.

The alignment of money and power has been with us throughout history. For millennia, power, conferred through authority, controlled money or wealth. During the last two hundred years, with the rise of liberal democracies and the spread of affluence and economic self-determination, economic power has increasingly led to political and social power. Since the end of the Second World War and particularly since the end of the Cold War, U.S. national and global economic power has expanded by many orders of magnitude. With the rise of emerging economies, particularly China and India, the global economy, at roughly $75 Trillion, is rapidly approaching $100 Trillion annually... Annually.

Today, outside of the few remaining tightly controlled political environments, money has become the authority by which power is conferred. We are seeing the danger of this imbalance, just as we historically saw the imbalance of the more vertical societies of the past.

There is a substantial, increasing global movement to raise the consciousness and accountability of money power to the highest standards of social, environmental and governance practices. The principals of sustainability, economic and social justice, transparency and accountability to all stakeholders, are being increasingly demanded. The global centers of money power are recognizing and aligning with this effort. A great distance is yet to be traveled to reach a significantly greater degree of progress.

We, at Arista Advisory Group, LLC, support and promote these principals and as a collaborator with you for financial planning and investment management, are focused on your sustained and increasing Good Wealth.
